

Community Health Workers (CHW) Toolkit

Centers for Disease Control and Prevention

Community Health Workers (CHWs) are trained public health workers who serve as a bridge between communities, health care systems, and state health departments.

Resources found at this site include:

- Online courses, lessons learned, and best practices to help state health departments train and further build capacity for CHWs in their communities.
- Training and education materials for CHWs to use within their communities.

Access at: <https://www.cdc.gov/dhdsp/pubs/toolkits/chw-toolkit.htm>